3 SHOTS FOR HER, 1 FOR HIM.

WOMAN DEAD, BUT NOT BY BULLETS; MAN WILL LIVE.

Memorandum of the Lungs Kills a Faithless Wife. Her Last Shot was Shooting at Her—He Objected. It Seems, to Her Going Back to Her Patient Husband.

Barely touched by one of three bullets that Joseph Beyers fired at her yesterday, Mrs. Annie Weinert, the wife of a locksmith living at 570 East 148th street, died of a hemorrhage of the lungs brought on by the excitement of the struggle with her assailant. Beyers apparently thought he had finished her with his pistol and put it to the back of his own head and fired one shot into himself. He is in Lincoln Hospital and will recover.

Mrs. Weinert had several times deserted her husband and six children to go away with Beyers, who the police say is a worthless fellow. Two months ago she went back to her husband and he forgave her. Weinert believes his wife was honestly trying to break away from Beyers and that her meeting with him yesterday was accidental.

Yesterday was to have been a festive occasion at the Weinert home. Hilda, aged 14 years, the oldest child, was the Queen of a May party at St. Mary's Park, and early in the day Mrs. Weinert started for the Mission of the Immaculate Virgin at 2 Lafayette place to bring home two of her children who were out on the mission when she ran away with Beyers last December.

After leaving her home in the Bronx Mrs. Weinert met Beyers somewhere. Early in the afternoon they appeared at the third store kept by Otto Jacoby at 600 Southern Boulevard, Jacoby had gone fishing and he left his store in charge of George Knecht, an acquaintance of Beyers. Beyers asked Knecht to take a walk around the block and let him and the woman have the place to talk about a business deal.

As Knecht departed Beyers and the woman walked to the back of the third store. Before Knecht had got to the corner he heard several pistol shots. When he got back to the store he found a group of children peering in. As Knecht arrived, Jacoby, the owner, appeared. Both entered the store together. They found Beyers staggering around the back room with a bullet hole in his head, while the woman lay on the bed with her clothing covered with blood. Near her was a five chambered pistol with one loaded cartridge.

Beyers was hurried to the hospital. Corner Berry was soon at the store. He supposed, like the others, that the woman had been shot to death. One bullet had gone into the bed, and an examination showed that another had clipped her ear, the excruciating pain to the pillow on which she lay. The third bullet was found imbedded in the mattress. The smoldering pillow had burned the woman's face slightly.

Coroner's Physician Rudinman performed an autopsy and found that none of the bullets had entered the woman's body and that her death was due to hemorrhage of the lungs. In Mrs. Weinert's purse was the following note scrawled with a lead pencil.

Forgive us all. I can't live without my Annie. She is the whole of me.

JOS. BEYERS.

The police didn't know what to make of

Pack Everything in Manahan's TARTINE MOTH BAGS

Tartine Moth Sheets and Rug Bags.

This note. They were inclined to think that Beyers had stuffed it into the woman's purse, to give the impression that she had taken her own life.

Mrs. Weinert's body was taken to the Alexander avenue station, where her husband saw it. He didn't show much emotion and the police didn't blame him. He had a locksmith's shop at 333 East Eighty-second street last December when he accused his wife of being unfaithful. They quarrelled and he slapped her face. She got a warrant for him and he was sent to Blackwell's Island for two weeks. While he was away Beyers took possession of his place, and when Weinert returned his shop had been cleaned out and his wife had gone, leaving her children behind.

Beyers is said to have relatives who kept him supplied with money. He regained consciousness soon after reaching the hospital and Capt. Ward tried to get the straight story of the shooting from him. "What are you trying to get out of me?" asked Beyers. "I'll tell you nothing."

MUST PRODUCE $15,000.

Court Tells Bankrupt Jewellers He Thinks They Are Scamps.

Weinreb & Merker, diamond dealers and jewelers, formerly at 40 Maiden lane, against whom a petition in bankruptcy was filed on Aug. 4, 1903, have been ordered by Judge Holt of the United States District Court to pay $15,000 to their trustees in bankruptcy. The judge says the circumstances show that they contemplated a fraudulent bankruptcy. Between July 11 and 20, 1903, they drew out $18,200 from their bank and went to Europe, but returned after the bankruptcy proceedings were instituted. As an explanation of the use of this money they said they used it in purchasing diamonds in a mysterious way, which diamonds, it was intimated, were smuggled. The judge thinks this story extremely improbable. It is precisely the kind of a story which would tell who had been engaged in the diamond business and had been planning a fraudulent bankruptcy, and had drawn $18,200 in cash just before their bankruptcy for the purpose of concealing it from their creditors.

Besides the $15,000, there is a deficiency of assets of $60,000, which is unsatisfactorily explained by stories of losses in business. The judge strongly suspects that they have a large part of the deficiency hidden somewhere, but upon the whole he feels that they have it is not sufficient to justify an order that they pay it over.

RECREATION PIERS OPEN.

All but the One at Third Street, Which is Used as a School.

All of the recreation piers, with the exception of the Third street pier on the East River, were formally opened to the public for the summer season at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Third street pier is now being used as a school. It will be opened after the school vacation begins. There will be music on all of the piers from 8 till 10:30 o'clock every evening. The piers will be open to the public between 7 A. M. and 11 P. M.

There are eight piers now; seven in this borough and one in Williamsburg.

BURGLAR FRIGHTENED HIMSELF

Entered a House, Saw His Reflection in a Mirror and Fled at It—He Ran.

BUFFALO, May 27.—There is a burglar in Buffalo the police would like to find. This burglar believes that he murdered an inmate of the home of George Urban, Jr., a millionaire miller of this city and one of the Republican Presidential electors of this State in the last campaign. The burglar entered the Urban house early yesterday morning. Two companions were on guard outside. A light was burning in the hall and this was just enough to reveal objects in the front part of the house somewhat indistinctly.

Sunk in the parlor wall opposite the hall door was a mirror extending from the ceiling to the floor. As the burglar stepped into the parlor he saw his reflection in this mirror and thought he saw a man coming for him. He drew his revolver and fired. The mirror was shattered and the inmate of the house heard the burglar strike the floor and scream. Before any of the Urban family could reach the scene the burglar got away. He and his two companions were seen to enter the house and the electric lights that illuminate the grounds were turned on.

Mail Carriers to Parade on May 30.

The mail carriers will parade on Decoration Day for the first time in eleven years. Of the 3,800 carriers in Manhattan, 2,000 will be in the procession, which will form at Fifty-eighth street and Fifth avenue at 2 o'clock and march south to Seventeenth street, and thence to Union Square, where they will be reviewed by Postmaster Willcox. After the review the marchers will proceed to Astor place, where the famous statue of Susan B. Cox will again be presented to the city.

HER CLOTHING CAUGHT FIRE

Miss Thompson, Former Postmaster at Johnstown, Badly Burned.

JOHNSTOWN, N. Y., May 27.—Miss Nellie Thompson, former postmaster, was walking across her lawn this afternoon when her light gown caught fire from a burning piece of paper. Immediately she was enveloped in flames. Her sister, Katherine, tried to save her by tearing her clothes from her, and she was burned terribly about the hands and arms.

The screams of the two brought several men to the scene. Charles A. Miller, a glove manufacturer, wrapped his coat about the woman, but did not succeed in quenching the flames. Nathan Wells, an insurance man, grabbed a laprobe from a carriage, threw it about Miss Thompson and smothered the fire.

Miss Thompson is prominent in society in the Mohawk Valley.

JAMES PETER KILLS HIMSELF

Once Well Known in Newark as a Contractor and Sand Dealer.

James Peter, who a few years ago was prominent as a sand dealer and excavation contractor in Newark, killed himself yesterday morning by looking himself in a small bedroom and turning on the gas. Despondency over his losses and ill health are said to have caused the act.

Mr. Peter was short and extremely stout. He weighed considerably over 300 pounds. Several years ago he lost over twenty horses in an epidemic, and since then his business had slipped away gradually. His father was Jacob Peter, one of the best known hay buyers and dealers in New Jersey twenty-five years ago. He leaves a wife and two brothers, one of whom is a well-to-do contractor in Newark.
